e Power in the Hands of a Canadian Company to Make the

and I consulted one of the best physicians in Helena, whose prescriptions failed to relieve me. I became alarmed, and at the suggestion of a friend purchased a bottle of Aker's English Remedy for coughs, and after taking it according to directions was completely cured. I therefore cheerfully recommend it. narp Competition Probable in the Next Pature, Opening Many New Channels for its Consumption.

o the metal trade, the only paper of in st read at the Ottawa meeting of the rican Institute of Mining Engineers that on the Sudbury nickel and copper sits, read by Dr. Edward D. Peters, Canadian Copper company, says the Age. The latter title is evidently a omer, growing out of the ignorance of presence of nickel in the ore in the early of the enterprise. Dr. Peters himself, is paper, carefully abstained from givdata bearing on the commercial side the question, dealing only with broad ements and descriptions technical in ir character. But some data were med from other sources which reveal the t, already expressed in declining prices the metal, that nickel will come within purchasing power of a far greater num-

e purchasing power of a far greater numr of consumers.
The situation, we believe, will become fficiently clear when we state that the erage total consumption of the world of re nickel is about 1,000 tons per annum, which one-third is credited to the United ates. With two furnaces only, the Canaan company is producing from, say, 250 ns smelted, daily, matte carrying about re and one-quarter tons of pure nickel, say 1,600 tons of the metal annually, here seems to be little doubt that that antity can be made at a very low price, rricularly since its production is accomnied with the output of about 2,500 tons copper, which will probably go far toard paying the cost of mining and reducon.

copper, which will probably go at the ard paying the cost of mining and reducon. It is stated that even at present prices the lost formidable of the world's producers itherto, the company working the deposits a Noumea, New Caledonia, confesses its ability to compete. Even when it is aditted that such tales of woe are to be aken with some allowance, the fact reliains that the Sudbury mines can control he market, force competitors to close down, and yet at their present rate of production upply the markets of the world with more of the metal than it has bee accustomed to ake. They are now exceeding consumption by 600 tons at least annually, even if so other producer makes a pound. It becomes a question then, in which a good nany people outside of the directors and tockholders of the company are interested, low low the price must go in order to push he excess into the hands of actual consumers. Nickel undoubtedly has a great nurinsic merit as a metal. It possesses valuable qualities peculiarly its own. At a low price new channels of consumption will be opened to it. Let us assume that it frops below fifty cents a pound. Will twice as much be consumed at that figure as there was when it was hovering near $1 a pound. The experience of the New Caledonia interests certainly does not encourage that belief. It is pretty well known that in the early days of the development of the deposits of the antipodes the markets of the world were quickly overstocked and that the metal could not be moved in spite of liberal concessions.

The policy of those controlling the Canadian deposits will shape the future of the nickel market. The magnitude of the deposits may induce the men interested to work on even a larger scale than they are now doing. They are understood to be men who are familiar with and inclined to great undertakings, who are conscious of their ability to market the metal profitably as low as 20 cents to 25 cents a pound. At a hearing before the senate committee Sam-uel J. Ritchie, of Akron, O., who is connected with the company, claimed that that figure could not be met. The managers may decide that their best interests demand may decide that their best interests demand a heavy production, coupled with low prices in order to create a much broader market than now exists. Any further additions to to the Sudbury plant may be interpreted as indicating that such is to be the policy to

We are inclined to receive with doubt the off-hand assertion that the assurance of a much lower range of values for any metal is reflected by an immediate and spontaneous development of the consumption. The same trouble which has been and will be found with aluminium will hamper nickel. We do not doubt that ultimately so many and so varied uses will be found that the increased quantities produced will be taken. But the history of nearly every common metal has proved that the development of new channels of consumption takes a good deal of time. Manufacturers must obtain the conviction that the low prices are not the result of a temporary flooding of the market. They must feel that when they adopt the recently cheapened metal for certain purposes they make the necessary changes in methods and in plant with the assurance that the money so invested will not be suddenly lost by a reaction. The great industrial community must learn to forget that nickel was once a dear metal. They must learn to class it as one which is available for many purposes for which it was never before thought of. All this, we repeat, takes time.

Meanwhile manufacturers using nickel to be followed.

Meanwhile manufacturers using nickel to and considerable extent will make their purchases for current use cautiously and will carry as little as possible of a stock of the metal whose near future is clouded with the prospects af a sharp decline.
